FAQ's

What is a Partial Dentures?

Dentures are called "Partial" if some of your own teeth are remaining.

Partial Dentures are normally best made on a metal base to make them stronger and thinner and to enable small metal retaining clasps to be used. These also help to keep the denture away from the margin of teeth and gums.

What are Implants?

Implants are an alternative to dentures.

An implant is a titanium metal rod which is placed into the jaw bone to act like a tooth root to support a denture or a crown.

Getting used to your denture.

It will take a bit of time to get use to your new denture, particularly if it is your first. Expect a number of adjustments to be needed. Always tell your clinician about your concerns, being as specific about them as possible. A complete denture will never feel like your own teeth, they will, however, become comfortable and functional with time.

"All of the above are private dentures and are made to fit the mouth and suit the face.

When completed even your closest friends will observe that you look different, you look well, even younger. However they will not realise you are wearing dentures. This is due to the way they are made, as the advert says eat, talk and smile with confidence. Look and feel 10 years younger, wrinkles gently eased away".
